

ERGONOMICS FOR EVERYONE

The broad areas that will be covered in HWWE 2009 include industrial applications; psychology and cognitive sciences and Human Computer Interaction; agricultural and animal husbandry, transport; public utilities; Occupational stress, health and safety; defense relevance; work physiology and sports science; rehabilitation; women's issues; design, interactive design and utility; and appropriate ergonomics applications in every strata of our lives. The principal focus will be on addressing issues intimately associated with small scale sector and cottage industries.

The conference will be held in December 17-19, 2009 at University of Calcutta, Kolkata, India. A pre conference workshop and a post conference workshop on Ergonomics Methodology will take place on 16th and 20th December 2009 respectively.

The conference will have technical and plenary sessions. Eminent academicians, researchers and experts of various fields will deliver learned lectures. In addition, a number of distinguished speakers will also be invited in different technical sessions. The conference is of special interest to academicians, designers, engineers, HRD and faculty managers, occupational stress relief specialists, researchers, students engaged in above mentioned fields

Humanizing Work and Work Environment

17th –19th December, 2009

About the Conference

Ergonomics or Human factor is the study of the physical and cognitive demands of work to ensure a safe and productive workplace. It aims at making overall work system more user-friendly and reliable. It also entails evaluation of human facilities, jobs, work methods and environment and equipment to match with the physical, physiological and psycho-sociological capabilities of users and thereby reduce fatigue, errors, discomfort and unsafe operation. Ergonomics thus has the potential of becoming a driving force for the efficient achievement of personal and organizational goals.

Indian Society of Ergonomics (ISE) has started a series of conferences termed as Humanizing Work and Work Environment (HWWE) with a broad perspective to share the common concerns for contemporary human factor issues.

Keeping in mind the above objectives, University of Calcutta, Department of Physiology is now organizing HWWE 2009 at Kolkata. The aim of this conference is to provide a platform to scientists, researchers and practitioners to exchange their views and experiences. We invite you to participate in this conference to be held in December 17-19, 2009 at University of Calcutta.

Occupational Ergonomics Laboratory

Department of Physiology, University of Calcutta took its first step towards the beginning of Ergonomics in the year 1971 when it launched the subject as a special paper in its Post Graduate Curriculum under the able guidance of Prof. Dr. Rabintra Nath Sen. This marked the birth of a new subject ERGONOMICS in India. Since its inception, the subject ergonomics has been able to generate a lot of interest among the students who have greatly benefited by studying ergonomics. Most of the past students have been successful in building their careers and are attached as faculty with some of the premier institutions of the country.
